"You might hear the other side," interrupted Orde. "In the first place," said he, producing a bundle of papers, "I have the note and the mortgages in my possession."

"Whence Heinzman will shortly rescue them as soon as I get to see him," countered Newmark.

"If you force Heinzman he'll land you," Orde pointed out.

"There is Canada for me. He travels with heavier baggage."

"You'd lose everything."

"Not quite," smiled Newmark. "And, as usual, you are forgetting the personal equation. Heinzman is—Heinzman. And I am I."

"Then I suppose this affidavit from Heinzman as to the details of all this is useless for the same reason?"

Newmark's thin lips parted.

"Correct," said he.

"But you're ready to compromise before the face of the note?"

Newmark hesitated.

"Yes," said he, "because I know you well enough to realize that there is a point where your loyalty to Heinzman would step aside in favor of your loyalty to your family."

"And you think you know where that point is?"

"It's the basis of my compromise."

Orde laughed.

"The worst of it is I believe you're right," said he at last. "You have the thing sized up, and there isn't a flaw in your reasoning. I always said that you were the brains of this concern. If it were not for one thing I'd compromise sure, and that one thing was beyond your power to foresee."

He paused. Newmark's eyes half closed again in a quick darting effort of his brain to run back over all the elements of the game he was playing.

"What is it?" asked Newmark at last.

"Heinzman died of smallpox at 4 o'clock this afternoon," said Orde.

Newmark's face went slowly gray. For a full minute he sat absolutely motionless.

"Where are you going?" asked Orde quietly.

"I'm going to get myself a drink in my bedroom," he snapped. "Any objections?"

"No. After you get your drink I want to talk to you."

Newmark snarled at him: "You needn't be afraid I'll run away. How'd I get out of town?"

Orde looked thoughtfully at Newmark's affidavit, which, duly disinfected, had been handed him by Dr. McMullen as important. Then he arose to his feet and glided softly across the room to take a position close to the door through which Newmark had departed. Finally the door swung briskly inward. Like a panther Orde sprang forward. He pinioned Newmark's arms to his side, where he held them immovable with one of his own. The other hand he ran down Newmark's right arm to the pocket. There followed an instant of resistance. With a sharp cry of pain Newmark snatched his hand out and gazed amazedly at the half-crushed fingers. Orde drew forth the revolver Newmark had grasped in the coat pocket. He spilled out the cartridges and tossed the empty weapon to Newmark.

"There's your plaything," said he. "So you wanted that affidavit, did you?"

He paused.

"I don't need to tell you that I've got you," said he finally. "nor what I think of you. I can send you over the road for the best part of your natural days; also I've got these notes and the mortgage."

"Quit it," growled Newmark. "Send me up and be d—d!"

"That's the question," went on Orde slowly. "You hurt me pretty bad, Joe. I thought of you as a friend. I had a hard time getting over that part of it. We've been together a good many years now, and as near as I can make out you've been straight as a string with me for eight of them. Then I suppose the chance came and before you knew it you were in over your neck."

"Oh, for God's sake, drop that preaching. It makes me sick!" broke out Newmark.

"I'm not preaching," said Orde, "and even if I were I've paid a good many thousands of dollars, it seems, to buy the right to say what I d—n please. And if you think I'm working up to a Christian forgiveness racket you're mistaken. I'm not. I don't forgive you."

"Well, turn me over to your sheriff and let's get through with this," said Newmark sullenly.

Orde rose.

"Look here, Newmark, that's just what I've been coming to, just what I've had such a hard time to get hold of. I'm not going to hand you over to any sheriff. I'm going to let you off. No," he continued, in response to Newmark's look of incredulous amazement, "it isn't from any fool notion of forgiveness. I told you I didn't forgive you. But I'm not going to den my future life with you. That's just plain, ordinary selfishness. I suppose I really ought to jinx you, but I do I'll always carry with me the thought that I've taken it on myself to judge a man. And I don't believe any man is competent to judge another."

Newmark, who had listened to this rambling exposition with curiosity, broke into a laugh.

"You've convicted me," he said. "I'm a most awful failure. I thought I knew you, but this passes all belief."

Orde brushed this speech aside as irrelevant.

"Our association, of course, comes to an end. There remain the terms of settlement. I could fire you out of this without a cent, and you'd have to get. But that wouldn't be fair. I don't give a hang for you, but I wouldn't be fair to me. Now, as for the northern peninsula timber, you have had seventy-five thousand out of that and have lent me the same amount. Call that quits. I will take up your note when it comes due and destroy the one given to Heinzman. For all your holdings in our common business I will give you my note without interest and without time for $100,000. That is not its face value nor anything like it, but you have caused me directly and indirectly considerable loss. I don't know how soon I can pay this note, but it will be paid."

"All right," agreed Newmark.

"Does that satisfy you?"

"I suppose it's got to."

"Very well. I have the papers here all made out. They need simply to be signed and witnessed. Faintly is the nearest notary. Come said he.

In silence the two walked the block and a half to the notary's house. Finally the papers were executed. In the street Newmark paused significantly, but Orde did not take the hint.

"Are you coming with me?" asked Newmark.

"I am," replied Orde. "There is one thing more."

In silence once more they returned to the shadowy law library. Newmark threw himself into the armchair. He was once again the coldly calculating, cynical observer. Orde turned to face him.

"You have five days to leave town," he said crisply. "Don't ever show up here again. Let me have your address for the payment of this note."

He took two steps forward.

"You're a dirty, low lived skunk. If you think you're going to get off scot free you're mightily mistaken."

Newmark half arose.

"What do you mean?" he asked in some alarm.

"I mean that I'm going to give you about the worst licking you ever heard tell of," replied Orde, buttoning his coat.

Five minutes later Orde emerged from Newmark's house, softly rubbing the palm of one hand over the knuckles of the other.

He turned out of the side street. His own house lay before him. He stopped, then stole forward softly until he stood looking in through the doorway.

Carroll sat leaning against the golden bars, her shining head with the soft shadows bent until it almost touched the strings. Her hands were straying idly over accustomed chords and rich modulations, the plaintive half music of reverie.

Orde crept to her unheeded. Gently he clasped her. She sank back against his breast with a happy little sigh.

"Kind of fun being married, isn't it, sweetheart?" he said.

"Kind of," she replied, and raised her face to his.

THE END.

Tennyson's Love For Birds.

Alfred Tennyson was all his life a great lover of the woods and fields. Trees, birds, and flowers were his everyday companions, and he faithfully studied the habits of Dame Nature's English nurslings. The hawk, the nightingale, the owl and the linnet were his favorite birds. He was also greatly interested in the sea birds, the peregrine falcons, the cormorants, seagulls, etc., and in the long legged sea birds, the visitors to marshes and pools. He thought the curlew, of which he has written in "Locksley Hall," a very noble bird and loved its wild call over the marshes. There are many references to birds native to England in his poems, and all of them show a thorough acquaintance with the individual characteristics of the different species.

At Farringford the poet's garden was the home of the wild birds of the hedgerows. The blackbird and robin and the smaller birds flocked there in great numbers, and it was considered far more important that they should feel welcome there than that the fruit should be permitted to ripen undisturbed or the garden be kept in proper order.

Domesticated birds also Tennyson numbered among his friends. Brilliant peacocks and more sober doves and pigeons, he loved them all.

A Helpful Suggestion.

The young man had married the rich man's daughter and wasn't killing himself with work to support her. One day the father called him up to talk to him.

"Look here," he said emphatically,

"why don't you go to work?"

"I don't have to," the son-in-law replied, with brazen effrontery.

"Well, you will have to."

"Why will I?"

"Because, sir, I can't live always to support you."

"But you will leave us something?"

"Not much, I won't. There won't be anything to leave."

The son-in-law was alarmed.

"Great Jupiter!" he exclaimed. "You don't mean to tell me that you have nothing?"

"That's about it."

The son-in-law devoted himself to profound thought for several seconds.

"I have a suggestion to offer," he said in a businesslike manner.

"What is it?" asked the old gent.

"Well, I suggest that you take out, say, a £20,000 life insurance on yourself to save wear and tear on my mind."—London Answers.

Over 95 per cent of the business of this country is done by bank checks instead of the handling of money because it is the safest and most convenient way of doing business. There is no reason why ninety-nine per cent of this business should not be done in this way.

The few people who are not using the conveniences offered by a bank such as this, are placing themselves in the same class as the ones who are not up to date in other respects.

You should have a check account at this bank. Come in and let us explain how simple it is.

John Murray was in Woodstock and Grafton last week, to visit with his brother, George of London, Ont., who was called to St. Stephen and other parts of New Brunswick on business. A pleasant family reunion was held at the home of R. L. McElroy in Grafton. This is the first time the brothers have met in seven years.

We have been criticised by some people for not publishing two different programs for church music on Easter Sunday, and we think unjustly so, for no one is any more willing than the TIMES to publish church or society notices under ordinary circumstances, but when we state that in addition to our regular work, we have in the last two weeks, turned out ten town reports, besides some school reports, in addition to this we had a large amount of advertising, and there were a number of columns of reading matter that we had to leave out, and with the entire crew working 18 hours a day, even then we had not the time to run 10 pages, although we had the material to do it with, when one stops to consider our position, we think that we were unjustly criticised, with all the work that we have turned out in the past two weeks.

The vesper service at the Lutheran church last Sunday afternoon, was largely attended. The program contained 17 numbers, but owing to the length of the musical selections, the address was omitted.

The Arts and Crafts exhibit on Monday afternoon by the Women's Club at Forester's Hall was largely attended. The different displays were very interesting and a new sum was realized from refreshments.

The services in all the churches on Sunday were largely attended and in each church special Easter music was provided and the floral displays were very elaborate. In addition to the regular services a Children's service was held at the Episcopal church in the evening, and a Union service was held in the M. E. church.

Potatoes.

Local buyers are paying 65 and 70 cents with few coming in.

NEW YORK.

Potato receipts have been rather light for some time, but with only limited buying they have been ample and an easy market has prevailed. Most farmers are thinking of spring work and they consider this price unattractive and will not market many of their potatoes at this figure. From all indications the local market will not improve, and if anything will go still lower. It is likely that large quantities of potatoes will be fed to cattle in New York, Michigan and Maine. Both at the yards and on the docks there has been a slow movement.

A Day at the Ranch.

The leading question of the day will soon be, "Are you going to 'A Day at the Ranch'?" and of course everybody is. The public has always turned out in full to patronize the Rodenbaugh entertainments, and this year the directors promise the strongest and best production they have ever staged.

Rehearsals are now under way, and the best talent in Houlton has been levied upon for the different parts.

"A Day at the Ranch" is in the form of a musical comedy, but without any decided plot. The fun is introduced by a Dutchman, Irishman, Negro, Jew, Tramp and "Tuff" Cow Boy. There will be Indians, Cow Boys, Ranch girls, Tenderfeet, a Wild West overture, full of novel surprises. An adult chorus of 50, a children's chorus of the same number, all sorts of dainty specialties, some of which are original, some especially arranged for the directors and some taken from the big City successes, such as "Candy Shop," "Gay Hussars," "50 miles from Boston," "A Gay Missionary," etc. There will be something doing every minute, not a dull moment from start to finish.

This is the same show that played in Norwich, Conn., a few weeks ago to $1600, and has played to capacity houses all winter in Connecticut and Massachusetts. It can be given just as well here, only with a smaller cast, and the same care and detail will be used as has characterized it in other places.

Tickets will soon be on sale by members of the cast, and you will do well to secure them early.

Annual Ball K. T.

The annual Ball of St. Aldemar Commandery Knights Templar took place on Monday evening at Mansur's Hall.

The event was attended by about 50 couples and socially it was a grand success, music being furnished by Bryson's orchestra, assisted by Miss Knowles of Fort Fairfield.

From 8.30 to 9 a concert was given, and soon after the grand march was started by E. C. C. C. Newell and Mrs. Newell leading followed by 20 members of the commandery in full Templar uniform. This commenced a dance order of 18 numbers which was much enjoyed by all present, at intermission a delicious lunch consisting of sandwiches, coffee, strawberries and cream, cake and ice cream, were served by a corps of waiters under the direction of Geo. A. Russell, after which dancing was resumed until after 2 a. m., when the last number of the dance order was finished.

The decorations were very elaborate and unique, the Japanese idea being carried out to the minutest detail. Japanese lanterns, parasols and other ornaments were tastefully festooned from the center of the hall to each corner and under a huge Japanese parasol ice water was served. The dance orders were neat and tasty with the Japanese effect, and were passed to those in the Grand March by Geo. Newell and Oakes Bryson dressed in Japanese costume.

The stage where the orchestra was located was arranged with K. T. Banners, cut flowers and Palms. Added to all this the beautiful dresses of the ladies, the brilliant uniforms of the Knights, and the full dress of the gentlemen added an attractiveness to the occasion which will long be remembered by everyone present.

While the attendance was not large enough to pay expenses, yet the committees can feel assured that the Ball was a success in every way and one long to be remembered.

FIELD DAY.

The first Wednesday in August, 1910.

W. C. T. U.

The devotional meeting of the W. C. T. U. held on Thursday, March 24th was led by Mrs. Clark, wife of Ady Clark.

The leader made interesting and appropriate remarks. Prayer was offered by several members, and a very helpful and profitable meeting was the result.

The program on Bible readings was carried out and many interesting readings given by different members.

Speaks up for Maine.

Representative Guernsey of Maine, protested in the House Friday against Massachusetts members being allowed to voice the sentiment of New England. He obtained about two minutes to get on record about the plan to abolish position agencies, which some of the Massachusetts members favored.

The representatives from Maine in recent years have taken practically no part in House proceedings except to vote. Since the resignation of Representative Lathfield, no member from Maine has been prominent in the House. Mr. Guernsey says he intends to keep harping away on the idea that Maine is an integral part of New England, and although often in accord with Massachusetts, prefers to voice her own opinions in the national House.

84 Miles an Hour.

The following was taken from the Bangor Commercial of last week.

Undoubtedly the most remarkable automobile trip ever made in this section of the state, and in Maine for that matter, was successfully accomplished Sunday, when a party of four Bangor men went three miles beyond Buck's Cove, on Sebec lake, over rough logging roads to Engel's lumbering camp. Returning the party made about seven miles on the ice in five minutes. Considering the time of year and the character of the roads travelled, the feat is a remarkable one.

Sunday morning, about 9 o'clock, the party of Bangor men, which included James M. McNulty, Chas. H. Maling, John H. Rice, with L. P. Swett of the Eastern Automobile Co. as chauffeur, left this city in a Model 17 Buick touring car to go to the Engel camps beyond Buck's Cove. Dover was the first objective point and it was reached in due season. Grooley's landing on Sebec lake was next negotiated, then the auto was headed across the lake seven miles to Buck's Cove where Engel & Co. are handling in 5,000,000 logs, thence through the woods three miles to the logging camps. The woods road is being traveled over daily by 200 horses and two log-haulers. The lumber camps were reached about 12.30, which is remarkable traveling for this time of year.

Leaving the camps about 3 o'clock the trip to the lake was made in quick time, but if the three guests on the trip thought they had been "going some" they were destined to revise their thoughts before Grooley's landing was reached, for the trip of seven miles from Buck's Cove to the landing was made in exactly five minutes, at the rate of 84 miles an hour. The remainder of the trip to this city was accomplished in fast time and the party reached this city at 7 p. m.

The Bangor men don't ever expect to enjoy a quicker or more remarkable auto trip than the one they had Sunday, but they say if they ever try to arrange one they are going to call on L. P. Swett to pilot them in a Buick Car.

Men's Federation.

The Laymen's Federation of Houlton met in the vestry of the Congregational church last Friday evening and after a beautiful supper which had been prepared by the ladies, was cleared away, the business side of the meeting was taken up.

Charles E. Dunn as chairman made a few remarks and then introduced Mr. A. A. Heald, of Waterville.

Mr. Heald who is Secretary of the Laymen's Movement in Maine spoke interestingly on the work of the Federation, its aim, the work already accomplished, and its spread throughout the other states of the Union. Mr. Heald said in substance that the Laymen's Movement really had its beginning in Maine and had spread in different forms throughout the United States. Its purpose is the bettering the conditions of men, socially and morally. The aim of the movement is not to support, or boost any political party, but to so train the young men that they will be eligible to the trustworthy offices and duties which the world has to offer. It is well known, that vice is organized, and the purpose of the Laymen's movement is to organize, and stamp out the corruption, which is so prevalent in politics and business.

The plan is to organize in each church some club, either a Brotherhood, or a Bible Class, the object being to get the sensible, thinking men together, without regard to their creed. When this is accomplished matters of public interest can be considered. The ministers are to be aids in the plan, which includes the looking after young men who go to other towns in search of work. The plan to be followed in this case will be unique. When a boy leaves home to seek employment in another city, the executive committee of the local Federation will notify some responsible representative in the city to which the young man is going, to meet the young man and assist him in finding desirable work and proper surroundings. The Y. M. C. A. is partially concerned in this work at the present time, and the work of the Laymen's Movement is supplementary, but on broader lines. The Laymen seek to retain the hold on the men, who have been helped by the Sunday School and the Y. M. C. A., and to continue the work on broader lines.

After Mr. Heald had finished speaking, Mr. Dunn introduced Mr. H. W. Arnold, of New York, Field Secretary of the Laymen's Movement. Mr. Arnold, who is an interesting speaker, briefly reviewed the past history of the Federation in Houlton since its foundation 18 months ago. His subject was "The Summons of the Hour" and during his address he told of his experiences in the different sections of the country where he had been in the interest of the work. Mr. Arnold said in substance that the Laymen's Movement had already gained a foothold in the extreme west and south, and in many cases was at the bottom of the exposures of corruption in business and politics.

The Church is not to be blamed for the corruption which is so prevalent, but it should not allow these things to pass unnoticed, and the new movement among the Laymen comes rather as a necessity than a whim. In the Protestant churches of this country there are five and one half million less men, than women engaged in church work of any kind, and the work of the Laymen today is preceding a great church epoch, as it has done in every great church movement.

The secret of the success of the coming church, will be its organization on business principles. The men have been spasmodic in their church work, and the enthusiasm of the work has oft-times been misplaced. After reading a short poem on "The Ladies' Aid" Mr. Arnold closed by summing up the three great principles necessary to the strength of the church, in three words as follows: Conservation, Concentration and Combination.

The meeting at the Bijou Theater Sunday afternoon was well attended, but many were disappointed to learn that Mr. Arnold, was confined to his bed and was unable to keep any of his appointments for the day. Mr. Heald spoke briefly on the work of the Federation in Maine, and the business side of the work among corporations.

Rev. Mr. Kinney, who is conducting evangelistic services at the Methodist church preached an able sermon on Overcoming Evil and the afternoon service was concluded by singing.

In the evening a union service was held in the Methodist church, and Mr. Heald and Rev. Mr. Kinney continued along similar lines of Christian work.

What this means for Malawi's rural population, drawn from both the study conducted by Goss and Iqbal for Malawi and elsewhere, is that there is a need to focus on the new wave of Africanisation of the rural labour force, and to ensure that the rural population is not marginalised.

Cadillac

The Cadillac established a new value in automobiles and has maintained it.

"Thirty"

Our supply of these Cars are limited and the demand is greater than ever.

The middle west is taking up automobiles, and the Cadillac is very popular there as everywhere else.

Municipalities are taking large numbers of these cars for ambulances, police patrol wagons, and for use in the different departments. New York City alone has given orders for fifty.

Large corporations like the Edison Electro Company in Boston, which had been using several makes of cars in their business before, have decided to use Cadillacs for 1910.

An owner of a Cadillac, anywhere, is always satisfied with his car, and will not part with it, hence no second-hand Cadillacs.

Every Cadillac owner is satisfied with his car, and speaks a good word for it to his neighbor.

Every thoughtful man who is considering the purchase of an automobile, instinctively thinks of the Cadillac, as the name is synonymous with a serviceable, reliable, and economical automobile. It is a manufactured and not an assembled car.

No factory in the world is so well equipped to turn out a car for constant every day service at so low an expense of up-keep.

About 12 members of Kora Temple Order of the Mystic Shrine attended a meeting in St. John last week and report a very pleasant time.

Benjamin Bachelder, meat cutter at McGary Bros. was absent from his duties last week on account of a severe attack of tonsillitis.

Eugene Woodbury, clerk in the American Express office is confined to the house by illness, and R. W. E. Thorndike is taking his place.

Easter Sunday was a beautiful day and nearly everyone attended church at some place, there being services morning, afternoon and evening.

F. H. Hazleton of Portland accompanied by his son was in Houlton last week on business with his Insurance agency and favored the Times with a call.

Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Adams left here Saturday for Boston where they will remain for some time at the home of his son Cecil, during their absence abroad.

Miss Virginia Donnell returned Monday to Washington, D. C. to resume her school, and on June 4 will sail for Europe. She was accompanied by Mrs. Donnell.

William K. Pipes, a prominent business man of Presque Isle was in Houlton, Thursday conferring with the committee in regard to the Camden Pilgrimage to St. Aldemar Commandery K. T., in June.

Joseph Boyd was driving on Main street, Sunday, near the Cushing house when his horse suddenly reared and then dropped to the ground and died at once. A double team was secured and he was taken away and buried.

The first cargo of sulphate of potash to be brought to Boston from Bremen, Germany arrived in the steamship Tritonia last week. The shipment, 3500 tons, will be forwarded to Houlton, to be converted into fertilizer for potatoes by the Buffalo Fertilizer Co.

The Star-Herald comes to us now from one of the latest Whitlock presses, and the paper shows the good work that these presses can do. Bro. Collins is to be congratulated upon keeping up to date in his equipment for furnishing news and job work to the people.

Owing to an error in our account of the votes cast for Selectmen at the Town meeting we stated that A. A. Stewart had 289 and Nathaniel Tompkins had 337. These should have been reversed as Mr. Stewart had 337 which was the largest vote of any one man for the office.

On the evening of April 5th, the Colby College Dramatic Club will present the popular play "One of the Eight" at Heywood Opera House under the auspices of Ricker Classical Institute. The play has been a success wherever presented and should draw a large crowd. The profits will be applied to the payment of the new piano.

The new factory of the Buffalo Fertilizer Co. is fast nearing completion. The grinding machinery was started last Wednesday and the company is now putting out 100 tons of fertilizer daily. The material damaged by the fire was sent to Buffalo, N. Y. for analysis, and new material for immediate use is being received daily at the works.

Samuel H. Powers.

Samuel H. Powers, a well known resident of Houlton, died at the Soldier's Home at Togus on Saturday morning where he went about three weeks ago, at the age of 79.

Mr. Powers was well known all over Aroostook County where he made his home, most of the time in Houlton, and also at Bridgewater, Mars Hill and Belfast in all of these places he was in the furniture and upholstery business, but of late years he had not been in business.

He was first admitted to the Soldier's Home in 1898, having enlisted as a private in Co. M, First Maine Heavy Artillery in 1863, and has been an inmate at the home at different times.

The remains were interred in the cemetery at Togus.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

SPECIAL ARTICLES.

Under this heading any questions that may arise regarding the subjects mentioned in these columns will be cheerfully answered by the author.

Formaldehyde.

ITS USES UPON THE FARM AND IN THE HOME, PARTICULARLY IN TREATING DISEASES OF POTATOES AND OATS.

A typical example of the practical effect of work in abstract science is found in the discovery of Formaldehyde by Professor Hoffman of the University of Berlin while investigating the purely scientific question of the oxidation of alcohols. A few years later another found that this gas offered a better means of disinfection than any till then known, thus making possible the saving of thousands of lives and millions of money formerly lost from plague or pestilence. Later still, after the microscope of the scientist had revealed that oat smut was caused by an invisible fungus, which adheres to the seed and is planted with it, it was discovered that this same Formaldehyde would kill this fungus completely without hurting the seed oats, and thus prevent the millions of loss from smut.

Formaldehyde is now being applied to potatoes, particularly in treating potato scab and blackleg, and the Perth Amboy Chemical Works, 100 William St., New York City, through the medium of John Watson & Co., of this town, is circulating a pamphlet "FORMALDEHYDE, Its Uses upon the Farm and in the Home, particularly in treating diseases of Potatoes and Oats." Formaldehyde as purchased is a water-white liquid with a penetrating odor which, however, practically disappears in the diluted form in which it is generally used. Like ammonia, Formaldehyde is a solution of gas in water, but unlike ammonia it does not lose strength on standing.

The pamphlet says in part: "The farmers of Maine, particularly those of Aroostook County where potatoes and oats are the leading agricultural crops should not overlook the grave consequences which are sure to result from the continued use of disease infected seed. Any region which is given over almost entirely to the growing of a single crop on a large and intensive scale provides ideal conditions for the introduction and spread of the destructive diseases affecting this crop."

Potato scab is caused by a minute parasitic fungus which burrows in the surface of the growing tubers. It is spread by means of infected seed, but if once in the ground may persist for some years. The use of clean seed, disinfected with Formaldehyde will entirely prevent its spread.

Blackleg is a bacterial disease which attacks the stem of the potato, blackening it and killing it at or near the surface of the ground. It also causes a soft, wet, stinking decay of the tuber. Like scab it is introduced by means of infected tubers. Discarding all unsound or diseased tubers and disinfecting the remainder with Formaldehyde will prevent its spread.

Oat smut is caused by a fungus which attacks and destroys the oat grains and in their place produces millions of minute powdery, black spores which are scattered over the healthy grains at threshing time. When the grains are planted these smut spores germinate at the same time and infect the young oat plants. If seed oats are disinfected with Formaldehyde before planting all of the smut spores are killed. As a result a full crop of plump, healthy oats is obtained at harvest time with no blasted or smutted grains. Oat smut is much more prevalent in Maine than is commonly supposed, and while the loss is not total in any field observations and reports indicate that the loss as a whole is large.

The treatment for potato scab, blackleg and oat smut is very simple, requiring one of two methods: a solution which is made by one pint of Formaldehyde and thirty (30) gallons of water and the gas method. Both are explained fully and clearly in the pamphlet above and the treating of seed oats for smut is even easier and more simple than the treatment of seed potatoes.

The pamphlet also takes up in detail the use of Formaldehyde for disinfecting articles of apparel, bedding, rooms, furniture, sinks and stables, the different strengths of solution advised and methods of applying.

The last part of the pamphlet has to do with Seed Selection of Potatoes and Oats. It shows how the farmer may easily take up this all important work and carry it through with material results.

We earnestly urge our readers to promptly secure one of these booklets and give it careful consideration.

Capt. Bogardus again hits the Bull's Eye.

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: "I have suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and have used several well known medicines all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and oftentimes a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Pills and feel 100 per cent. better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this I owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my fellow sufferers." Sold by all druggists.

The Bottle-Fed Calf.

My experience in raising the so-called skim-milk calf may be of benefit to others. Allow the calf to suckle its mother until the milk is good, or at least a week. This gives the calf a good start.

Don't make the mistake of taking the calf out of the cow's sight, but allow it to be near her so she can see it and lick it. This not only satisfies the cow so that she will give you her full amount of milk, but assists the calf in his growth. If not convenient to put it so close, let it at least be where she can see it.

Now obtain a common quart beer bottle. Don't put on a nipple, but place the neck of the bottle in the calf's mouth, holding the bottle about as high as the cow's udder. This throws his head and neck more in the natural position and enables him to obtain his rations very much as he was intended to do, thereby assisting digestion. Tip the bottle a little at a time so as not to strangle him. In a little while he will learn to regulate this himself. He usually learns to suck very well the second time.

Rub him gently down the back while he is sucking—this keeps his blood circulating and makes his grow. Use his own mother's milk until he is past three months old as it is his own age and grows older as he does, while older or younger milk might make him sick. Give eight bottles a day, three in the morning, two at noon and three at night. Allow one of these bottles in the morning and one at night to be whole milk until he is six weeks old. Some might say "that is too expensive!" Give him all skim-milk. This is not true. If your cow does not give enough to allow the calf two quarts a day of whole milk and still give you a good profit, better turn cow and calf together and let them go—your cow is not worth keeping.

Run the milk through the separator as soon after milking as is possible, so as to allow him to have as much of the animal heat as can be obtained through skim-milk. If you attempt to warm the milk at all, do so by placing it in a double boiler, but never make the mistake of setting the pan of milk on a hot stove as in this way you cannot keep from scorching some parts of the milk, and soon you have a "scoury" calf and don't know what caused it. I have made it a rule to take the milk immediately from the separator to the calf. Do not at any time give more or less than the eight bottles a day.

Now about the care of the bottle: As soon as you are through feeding wash it two or three times with cold water, then with boiling water. This keeps it sweet and clean. If at any time the calf should become "scoury," clean the bottle by putting in coarse sand or fine gravel in water and shaking it well.

As soon as the calf begins to eat, give him twice a day a pint of crushed corn and cob and a pint of ground oats, increasing this slowly until by the time he is three and a half months old he is eating a half-gallon at a feed. In summer allow him the pasture, and in winter feed clover hay and corn-fodder with oat straw if it is clean and bright. I have always raised a better calf in winter, as dry feed agrees with them better than green. Change the dry feed until he has had some of each every day.

Give him plenty of fresh water to drink, fresh air, but not a draft, and a clean stall with plenty of bedding. As

Worms

Hundreds of children and adults have worms, but are treated for other diseases. The symptoms are—irregular bowels, loss of appetite, breath, sense of fullness, red and heavy eyelids, itching of the nose, grinding of the teeth, slow fever and often in children, convulsions.

TRUE'S Elixir

Established 1881. Is the best worm remedy made. Purely vegetable. Where no worms are present, acts as a tonic to correct stomach and bowels. Sure relief for constipation and biliousness. Ask your druggist for True's Elixir. "Keeps you and your children well." 25c, 50c, $1.00. DR. J. F. TRUE & CO., Auburn, Me.

often as you can, give him a rubbing with a brush. When you begin weaning him at about four or five months old, or whatever age you may see fit (but not too soon), taper off by feeding him milk twice a day, then once, and at last not at all, and he will scarcely know what has happened. Never abuse him, but be kind and gentle with him under all circumstances and thereby teach him to love you.

If you follow these directions, I am sure you cannot fail to be more than pleased with the results. A. R. N.

HOME CURE FOR ECZEMA.

Does it not seem strange that so many people suffer year in and year out with eczema?

A 25-cent bottle of a simple wash stops the itch and will surely convince any patient.

This wash is composed of mild and soothing oil of wintergreen mixed with thymol and glycerine, etc., and known as D. D. D. Prescription. We do not know how long the D. D. D. Laboratories will continue the 25c offer, as the remedy is regularly sold only in $1.00 bottles and has never before been put on the market on any special offer.

If you want relief tonight try a bottle at 25c on our personal recommendation.

H. J. Hatheway Co.

When it is possible, I prefer to make up my rations for breeding animals from home-grown foods, because many of the by-products grain foods contain elements that hurt the breeding qualities of the animals. Some of our best veterinary authorities voice the opinion that many cases of abortion in dairy herds are caused by these abnormal nitrogenous by-product foods.

Needful Knowledge.

Houlton People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease.

The symptoms of Kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Houlton proof:

Fraser Robinson, 48 High St., Houlton, Me., says: "I have received such great benefit from Doan's Kidney Pills that I do not hesitate to recommend them. Backache annoyed me for three or four years and when having an attack, I found it quite difficult to stoop or lift. Last spring I learned about Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a box at Hatheway Co's drug store, began their use. What is specially selected for William Tell Flour is stored up hermetically sealed tins at Ansted & Burke's big mills.

It is cleaned six times before grinding. Every grain is examined by the best tests under a microscope. No matter how pure William Tell is than other flours, it is always with a cleaning for the purpose of making it purest known to mankind.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

SPECIAL ARTICLES.

Under this heading any questions that may arise regarding the subjects mentioned in these columns will be cheerfully answered by the author.

Formaldehyde.

ITS USES UPON THE FARM AND IN THE HOME, PARTICULARLY IN TREATING DISEASES OF POTATOES AND OATS.

A typical example of the practical effect of work in abstract science is found in the discovery of Formaldehyde by Professor Hoffman of the University of Berlin while investigating the purely scientific question of the oxidation of alcohols. A few years later another found that this gas offered a better means of disinfection than any till then known, thus making possible the saving of thousands of lives and millions of money formerly lost from plague or pestilence. Later still, after the microscope of the scientist had revealed that oat smut was caused by an invisible fungus, which adheres to the seed and is planted with it, it was discovered that this same Formaldehyde would kill this fungus completely without hurting the seed oats, and thus prevent the millions of loss from smut.

Formaldehyde is now being applied to potatoes, particularly in treating potato scab and blackleg, and the Perth Amboy Chemical Works, 100 William St., New York City, through the medium of John Watson & Co., of this town is circulating a pamphlet "FORMALDEHYDE, Its Uses upon the Farm and in the Home, particularly in treating diseases of Potatoes and Oats."

Formaldehyde as purchased is a water-white liquid with a penetrating odor which, however, practically disappears in the diluted form in which it is generally used. Like ammonia, Formaldehyde is a solution of gas in water, but unlike ammonia it does not lose strength on standing.

The pamphlet says in part: "The farmers of Maine, particularly those of Aroostook County where potatoes and oats are the leading agricultural crops should not overlook the grave consequences which are sure to result from the continued use of disease infected seed. Any region which is given over almost entirely to the growing of a single crop on a large and intensive scale provides ideal conditions for the introduction and spread of the destructive diseases affecting this crop."

Potato scab is caused by a minute parasitic fungus which burrows in the surface of the growing tubers. It is spread by means of infected seed, but if once in the ground may persist for some years. The use of clean seed, disinfected with Formaldehyde will entirely prevent its spread.

Black-leg is a bacterial disease which attacks the stem of the potato, blackening it and killing it at or near the surface of the ground. It also causes a soft, wet, stinking decay of the tuber. Like scab it is introduced by means of infected tubers. Discarding all unsound or diseased tubers and disinfecting the remainder with Formaldehyde will prevent its spread.

Oat smut is caused by a fungus which attacks and destroys the oat grains and in their place produces millions of minute powdery, black spores which are scattered over the healthy grains at threshing time. When the grains are planted these smut spores germinate at the same time and infect the young oat plants. If seed oats are disinfected with Formaldehyde before planting all of the smut spores are killed. As a result a full crop of plump, healthy oats is obtained at harvest time with no blasted or smutted grains. Oat smut is much more prevalent in Maine than is commonly supposed, and while the loss is not total in any field observations and reports indicate that the loss as a whole is large.

The treatment for potato scab, black-leg and oat smut is very simple, requiring one of two methods: a solution which is made by one pint of Formaldehyde and thirty (30) gallons of water and the gas method. Both are explained fully and clearly in the pamphlet above and the treating of seed oats for smut is even easier and more simple than the treatment of seed potatoes.

The pamphlet also takes up in detail the use of Formaldehyde for disinfecting articles of apparel, bedding, rooms, furniture, sinks and stables, the different strengths of solution advised and methods of applying.

The last part of the pamphlet has to do with Seed Selection of Potatoes and Oats. It shows how the farmer may easily take up this all important work and carry it through with material results.

We earnestly urge our readers to promptly secure one of these booklets and give it careful consideration.

Capt. Bogardus again hits the Bull's Eye.

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says:—"I have suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and have used several well known medicines all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and oftentimes a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this I owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my fellow sufferers." Sold by all druggists.

The Bottle-Fed Calf.

My experience in raising the so-called skim-milk calf may be of benefit to others. Allow the calf to suckle its mother until the milk is good, or at least a week. This gives the calf a good start.

Don't make the mistake of taking the calf out of the cow's sight, but allow it to be near her so she can see it and lick it. This not only satisfies the cow so that she will give her full amount of milk, but assists the calf in his growth. If not convenient to put it so close, let it at least be where she can see it.

Now obtain a common quart beer bottle. Don't put on a nipple, but place the neck of the bottle in the calf's mouth, holding the bottle about as high as the cow's udder. This throws his head and neck more in the natural position and enables him to obtain his rations very much as he was intended to do, thereby assisting digestion. Tip the bottle a little at a time so as not to strangle him. In a little while he will learn to regulate this himself. He usually learns to suck very well the second time.

Rub him gently down the back while he is sucking—this keeps his blood circulating and makes his grow. Use his own mother's milk until he is past three months old as it is his own age and grows older as he does, while older or younger milk might make him sick. Give eight bottles a day, three in the morning, two at noon and three at night. Allow one of these bottles in the morning and one at night to be whole milk until he is six weeks old. Some might say "that is too expensive!" Give him all skim-milk." This is not true. If your cow does not give enough to allow the calf two quarts a day of whole milk and still give you a good profit, better turn cow and calf together and let them go—your cow is not worth keeping.

Run the milk through the separator as soon after milking as is possible, so as to allow him to have as much of the animal heat as can be obtained through skimmilk. If you attempt to warm the milk at all, do so by placing it in a double boiler, but never make the mistake of setting the pan of milk on a hot stove as in this way you cannot keep from scorching some parts of the milk, and soon you have a "scoury" calf and don't know what caused it. I have made it a rule to take the milk immediately from the separator to the calf. Do not at any time give more or less than the eight bottles a day.

Now about the care of the bottle: As soon as you are through feeding wash it two or three times with cold water, then with boiling water. This keeps it sweet and clean. If at any time the calf should become "scoury," clean the bottle by putting in coarse sand or fine gravel in water and shaking it well.

As soon as the calf begins to eat, give him twice a day a pint of crushed corn and cob and a pint of ground oats, increasing this slowly until by the time he is three and a half months old he is eating a half-gallon at a feed. In summer allow him the pasture, and in winter feed clover hay and corn-fodder with oat straw if it is clean and bright. I have always raised a better calf in winter, as dry feed agrees with them better than green. Change the dry feed until he has had some of each every day.

Give him plenty of fresh water to drink, fresh air, but not a draft, and a clean stall with plenty of bedding. As

Worms

Hundreds of children and adults have worms, but are treated for other diseases. The symptoms are: indigestion, foul tongue, offensive breath, sense of fullness, nervousness and heavy feeling of the nose, grinding of the teeth, slow fever and often, in children, convulsions.

TRUE'S Elixir

Ask your druggist for TRUE'S Elixir. "Keeps you and your children well." 25c, 50c, $1.00. DR. J. F. TRUE & CO., Auburn, Me.

often as you can, give him a rubbing with a brush. When you begin weaning him at about four or five months old, or whatever age you may see fit (but not too soon), taper off by feeding him milk twice a day, then once, and at last not at all, and he will scarcely know what has happened. Never abuse him, but be kind and gentle with him under all circumstances and thereby teach him to love you.

If you follow these directions, I am sure you cannot fail to be more than pleased with the results. A. R. N.

HOME CURE FOR ECZEMA.

Does it not seem strange that so many people suffer year in and year out with eczema?

A 25-cent bottle of a simple wash stops the itch and will surely convince any patient.

This wash is composed of mild and soothing oil of wintergreen mixed with thymol and glycerine, etc., and known as D. D. D. Prescription. We do not know how long the D. D. D. Laboratories will continue the 25c offer, as the remedy is regularly sold only in $1.00 bottles and has never before been put on the market on any special offer.

If you want relief tonight try a bottle at 25c on our personal recommendation.

H. J. Hatheway Co.

When it is possible, I prefer to make up my rations for breeding animals from home-grown foods, because many of the by-products grain foods contain elements that hurt the breeding qualities of the animals. Some of our best veterinary authorities voice the opinion that many cases of abortion in dairy herds are caused by these abnormal nitrogenous by-product foods.

Needful Knowledge.

Houlton People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease.

The symptoms of Kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of stinging. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Houlton proof:

Fraser Robinson, 48 High St., Houlton, Me., says: "I have received such great benefit from Doan's Kidney Pills that I do not hesitate to recommend them. Backache annoyed me for three or four years and when having an attack, I found it quite difficult to stoop or lift. Last spring I learned about Doan's Kidney Pills and procured a box at Hatheway Co's drug store, began their use. They proved to be just what I needed and relieved the pain in my back in a remarkably short time."
